

Argue Middletown Zoning Law Change to Permit Levitt To Build "Country Clubbers"

By Staff Reporter

Will the Levittown "Country Clubbers" be in Middletown twp. in the Spring?

The controversial plan to amend the 1948 township zoning code to let Levitt & Sons, Inc., build that type of house in the southeast corner of the township was discussed and debated last night by municipal officials, professional planners, civic leaders and outspoken citizens. A crowd of 250 township residents attended the hearing on the zoning change, in the township building, Hulmeville rd.

No decision was reached. In drawing the meeting to a close, 2½ hours after it started, Supervisor Raymond Secules said, "We have worked on the subject for a considerable length of time. We will take all these questions under advisement, and the results will be announced. I don't see why it will be necessary to hold another meeting."

Speaking in favor of changing the zoning of the 2,000-acre tract, of which Levitt & Sons owns 1,500 acres, to reduce the minimum lot size from 15,000 to 12,000 square feet, were two representatives of the Institute of State & Local Government of the University of Pennsylvania, which recently made a survey and recommended the change.

Morton Lustig, of the Institute's Government Consulting Service, said the entry of the Country Club would not raise the taxes of older township residents. "The taxes in the Levittown sections would be higher," he said, "but Levittown

The Past and The Future

Arrival of Fairless Works of The U. S. Steel Co. Has Brought Large Expansion to Falls Twp.; Supervisors and Authority Are Very Active

This is the eighth in a series of interviews with officials of municipalities in Lower Bucks County concerning accomplishments and those playing a part in its great expansion in 1952 and the outlook for 1953. In boroughs, the presidents of councils were asked to list accomplishments in 1952, and the boroughs were requested to give the outlook for 1953. In townships, the head of the supervisors or president of commissioners were interviewed.

The arrival of the U. S. Steel Fairless Works to Falls twp. has brought a large expansion there, especially in housing developments in Levittown and Fairless Hills, and has given the board of supervisors many new responsibilities.

"Things are progressing slowly, and are being straightened out," according to Clifford Watson, new chairman of the township board. "I feel sure the building program will continue, and expect an increase in population and industry in Falls twp. next year." As for additional housing: "I feel sure they'll keep on building."

Refuses New Trial To A Coal Dale Motorist

Following Conviction of Involuntary Manslaughter; Divorces Granted

In an opinion, filed by Judge Blester, Paul G. Burns, Coal Dale, was refused a new trial and directed to appear for sentence in criminal court here.

A jury, May 29, 1952, convicted Burns of involuntary manslaughter but recommended leniency. The defendant was acquitted on a charge of operating a car while under the influence of intoxicating liquors.

Two Falls twp. patrolmen, Joseph Kish and Julius Meszaros, who investigated the pedestrian-car collision Jan. 1, 1952, in Falls twp., arrested the defendant.

Anthony Rossi, 3917 N. Fairhill street, Phila., was fatally injured by the defendant's car which was going west on Route 1.

Sanitary Conditions At Trailer Camps To Be Kept in Check

Theodore Staudenmayer Says Much Progress Has Been Made

A "cleanup" of trailer camps was listed by Theodore Staudenmayer, Bucks county health sanitarian, as the major accomplishment in the drive for better sanitary conditions in lower Bucks county in 1952.

For 1953, Staudenmayer predicted "continuous checks" of sanitary conditions in trailer camps in the area.

"We hope to return to the 'Bensalem township' project within the next six to eight weeks," said Staudenmayer, "and we hope to have conditions there in a lot better shape this summer."

A study of sewage conditions in Bensalem township was instituted last August after Staudenmayer said he found widespread violations of health laws in the Cornwells Heights area.

Staudenmayer said that the major portion of his time last year had been spent in going over trailer camps in the lower Bucks county area "with a fine tooth comb."

"Quite a few bad sewage problems, and trash and garbage problems. Some of these people spent quite a bit of money installing cesspools, and many dug their own wells and installed chlorinators. The major-

Township School Board Holds-Up Delhaas Addition

By Staff Reporter

High bids for school construction again plagued the Bristol township school board when last night, at the Delhaas High School, for the fourth time in a row, township school authorities were forced to hold off awarding of construction contracts because construction costs exceeded budgeted figures.

Total low base bids for construction of the extension of the Delhaas High School, on Rogers road, amounted to $1,707,908. This figure is approximately 4.58% higher than either the school board or the Bristol township School District Authority which will build the school had expected the cost to be.

Following the opening of the bids by Albert C. Smith, secretary of the school authority, J. Russell Straub, school board president, called for a closed meeting.

When the meeting re-opened William Clifton, chairman of the finance committee of the school board, moved that the board advise the Authority to hold up the awarding of the contracts until the architect, Albert E. Mickelwright, had a chance to consult with the State Dept. of Public Instruction on the cost of the construction contracts.

Normally the contracts would not have been awarded at last night's meeting because the plan, according to Smith, is to receive bids not only for the Delhaas addition, but for George Taylor school, tonight, and when total cost is known, to sell bonds in the amount necessary to cover the cost of both of the schools.

According to Clarence Young, the cost of the school itself amounted

FISH STORY

For 14 years Professor L. J. Smith, So. African ichthyologist, tramped the beaches and haunted the fishing wharves of eastern Africa in hopes that some fisherman might snag onto a coelacanth, a prehistoric fish which has been thought extinct for millions of years. The coelacanth is a fish not found in every fish market, with fins which are actual appendages. From pictures they seem to look like arms and legs. Professor Smith and his colleagues think it may be the "missing link" between sea dwelling and land dwelling creatures.

Apparently the professor had done a good job of salesmanship up and down the coast. When a native hauled a strange five-foot fish into his boat near an island group between Mozambique and the African coast, someone spotted the resemblance and notified Professor Smith. The professor managed to persuade government officials that this was a red hot find and they let him take a military plane to get to Mozambique. When he finally knelt on the deck of a schooner and saw he really had his rare fish, he wept.

The scientific significance of the find is something to be left to future research but if only half that is said about this creature is true, there may be headlines forthcoming.

PLANE SPOTTING PAYS OFF

The other afternoon the Independence, the big DC-6 which is the personal plane of the President of the United States and is used for all sorts of chores, was winging serenely toward New York from Canada. Aboard were Secretary of State Dean Acheson and a party. Mr. Truman had put the plane at the disposal of Mr. Acheson so that he could keep a Canadian appointment and still get back to New York in time for UN conferences.

Over northeastern New York state a 14-year-old plane spotter picked up the phone and notified the filter center that a four-engine plane was moving in a southerly direction at about 5,000 feet. What started out to be a routine report reacted like a time bomb at filter headquarters because no flight plan had been filed on such a plane.

Jet interceptors were alongside the big blue and silver plane in a matter of minutes. There was considerable radio traffic when the pilots of the jet planes reported what an important fish they had caught. It seems the flight plans had been filed, but, because of fumbling, they hadn't been forwarded to the proper American channels from Canada.

Here is an object lesson in the value of the work being done by a hardworking and unsung crew of civilians on behalf of the country's safety. It isn't difficult to imagine what would have happened had this been an enemy plane sneaking down the air lanes to New York under the flag of a peaceful commercial airliner.

"WASHINGTON REPORT"

by Fulton Lewis, Jr.

(Copyright, 1952, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7. During the political campaign in Wisconsin, when the Democrats were using every trick in the books to defeat Senator Joseph R. McCarthy, a speaker was imported from Washington, D. C., under the phony label that he represented the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Political advertisements, paid for by the Democratic Organizing Committee of Outagamie County, Wisconsin, read:

"FBI man answers McCarthy. Hear Ed Morgan on station WHDY."

These were inserted in newspapers and scattered about on handbills.

Morgan was chief counsel for the Tydings Committee of the Senate that was instructed to investigate McCarthy's charges of Communism in government—the one that looks sillier every day now that the Loyalty Review Board has started kicking Reds off the federal payroll. Morgan and ex-Senator Millard Tydings couldn't find a single Moscow comrade in Washington, a story Morgan related with considerable flourish to Wisconsin voters. In fact, it was so good that McCarthy wired J. Edgar Hoover, director of the FBI, to determine if Morgan really did represent the FBI.

Hoover wired McCarthy that Morgan had no connection with the Federal Bureau of Investigation, nor had he been associated with it for the past five years. McCarthy read Hoover's telegram on a statewide broadcast, which hurt the Democrats to a degree that prompted them to bring pressure on Attorney General James P. McGranery in an effort to get Hoover to take back his denial. McGranery to his everlasting credit, told Morgan, Democratic National Committee Chairman Stephen Mitchell, and James McInerney, head of the Justice Department's Criminal Division, to go peddle their politics elsewhere.

Morgan is the same character who early in the political campaign offered his services to the Republican National Committee. They couldn't say "no" fast enough as they ushered him to the door.

I have before me a copy of Morgan's radio and television speech against McCarthy. In it he terms J. Edgar Hoover his "great, dear friend," and states that he is speaking out against the Wisconsin Senator at considerable risk to the safety of his family. How is that for hogwash?

But Morgan was just getting warmed up. Here is more of the same:

"I say again that he (McCarthy) has been aiding the Communists. He has confused us on the issue of Communism. He has hurt investigations of the intelligence agencies of government. He has unnecessarily exposed their method and techniques for protecting the security of this country. But most important of all is the fact that he has not exposed a single Communist, not one of the individuals that he charged, not one was not known to me as an individual who long before had been investigated by the security agencies of our government."

McCarthy presented 81 cases to Morgan when the latter was chief counsel of the Tydings Committee. Morgan cleared all of them.

Foremost, he cleared Owen Lattimore, who has recently been indicted on perjury charges.

He cleared McCarthy's case No. 8, Stanley Graze. Less than a month ago Graze refused to tell the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee whether or not he is PRESENTLY engaged in espionage against the United States.

Morgan cleared John Carter Vincent. Vincent was suspended last week by the President's Loyalty Review Board on the grounds of "reasonable doubts" about his loyalty to the U. S.

Morgan cleared O. Edmund Clubb. Clubb was suspended by the State Department Loyalty Board.

Morgan cleared Edward G. Posniak. Posniak was eased off the State Department payroll.

Morgan cleared Esther C. Brunauer. She now is barred from federal employment in sensitive areas.

Morgan cleared Mary Jane Keeney. She was so left wing even the United Nations fired her.

Morgan cleared John S. Service. Service was fired on the grounds of doubtful loyalty from the State Department.

There are others, such as David Zablodowsky, now with the U. N., who was cleared by Morgan. Later Zablodowsky said he had cooperated with the Communist underground in Washington.

Morgan and Tydings can't deny that they knew what they were supposed to do. Here, on page 105, part 1, of the published hearings of their investigation is a statement by Tydings:

"Our job is to hear evidence that has to do with disloyalty in the State Department and other branches of the government where State Department employees have gone."

They missed the United Nations entirely where some 40 Reds, largely from the State Department, are in the process of being booted off the payroll.

For my money I'll take McCarthy over Morgan when it gets down to knocking Communists out of government agencies.

three. There is a possibility of more officers being added by Spring. We now have two police cars, after starting out the year with one.

The year of 1952 was a busy one for the Township of Falls Authority. They reorganized last January, with new officers, started construction of a sewage treatment plant in Fergusonsville that will soon be in use, and are now digging wells for a water supply.

The authority is already providing Fairless Hills Village with sewage service, and will soon begin piping water there from Curtis-Hill Lake, where wells to be 60 and 100 feet deep are now half completed.

In the new year the Authority, now privately financed, will begin floating nearly three million dollars worth of bonds, to become self-supporting, according to John A. Collins, new chairman.

Mr. Collins and the other present directors of the Authority were named in January, 1952, when the founders resigned to establish a school authority for the township. Maurice V. Shull is now vice-chairman; Wilfred Eckelman, secretary; John Krueger, treasurer, and R. Spencer High, assistant secretary.

The Fergusonsville sewage plant, on Neshaminy Creek, is "considerably completed," Mr. Collins said today. "By Jan. 31 we will be able to take care of primary sewage there. We are primarily interested in getting the new plant in operation," he said, "but later we'll be able to accommodate additional users along the route of the interceptor line, which runs 4.8 miles from Fairless Hills to the sewage plant."

Curtis-Hill Lake, site of the Authority's wells, is located near the Morrisville Pennsylvania Railroad yard. Asked about predictions that the water might soon be exhausted from the lake, Mr. Collins said: "Our engineers tell us that the lake will be able to provide sufficient water to serve future developments for 20 years. They were told by scientists that the site is in an old river valley in which the Delaware ran from Yardley ages ago."

Fairless Hills will also be the Authority's first water customer. The village now is served by local wells installed by Danherst Corp., but Mr. Collins says as the houses increase in number, that source will become inadequate. "We already have the pipe to lay from the Curtis-Hill Lake to Fairless Hills," he says.

"We expect to serve the new Fallsington Elementary School," Mr. Collins says, "and also the residents of Fallsington if they want it. And we may serve the $7,000,000, 40-acre shopping center to be constructed on the Bellardo farm. The water pipes for Fairless Hills will run past the site."

If Junior Won't Drink Milk

By CARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, Ph.D.

SOME years ago a mother and her son, six, were week-end guests of ours. At her request, a small glass of milk was set before his plate, but he didn't touch it. He said he didn't want it, that he didn't like milk. Wisely, the mother didn't make an issue of the matter. It's always foolish to attack an eating problem away from home.

In the boy's absence the mother told me she was worried that her son would not drink milk; that the dentist who cares for his teeth is also concerned; that after this dentist had talked to the boy about his need of drinking plenty of milk, the lad did drink milk for two meals but has consumed none since. And this suggests that whereas such propaganda at the dentist's or at school can have good temporary effect, it is usually futile except when reinforced by successful home procedure.

Milk at Start of Meal

When the mother pressed me for advice, I suggested that she never again tell this child to drink milk; that instead she begin his meal with nothing else before him but about a quarter or a glass of milk, informing him calmly in the fewest possible words that he would receive no other food until he had consumed the milk; that she should, furthermore, make sure he could get no other food between meals.

The mother expressed doubt that she could do this, and I've learned since that this lad still drinks no milk.

Of course, this mother, like many other mothers with a similar problem, provided all sorts of victuals cooked with milk for this lad, but a number of these foods he also refused. I don't know a single child refusing pure milk who gets enough milk disguised in other foods. Besides, all the extra trouble mothers go to in order to include milk in other diets for the no-milk-drinking child is an unnecessary burden to her and harmful morally to the child. Nor has he had thereby good training for comfortable and acceptable social adaptation for his later years. What's more, he hardly will drink milk when he is fifteen, forty or eighty, though milk at all ages is a highly essential part of the diet.

Commands Futile

The problem of refusing to drink milk practically always arises because the parents command the child to drink milk; and as he refuses to obey, they repeat the command amid all sorts of emotional turmoil. This problem would be easily solved if they applied the simple principle of never telling the child to drink milk or any other particular food, but would center on the principle: nothing else until after this small bit of food is consumed. This is very different from telling the child he must eat any particular food.

If you consider my advice worthy of a trial, be sure to make the portion of milk or of any other essential food presented to the child very small, increasing this amount gradually, but only after he has lost resistance to this food.

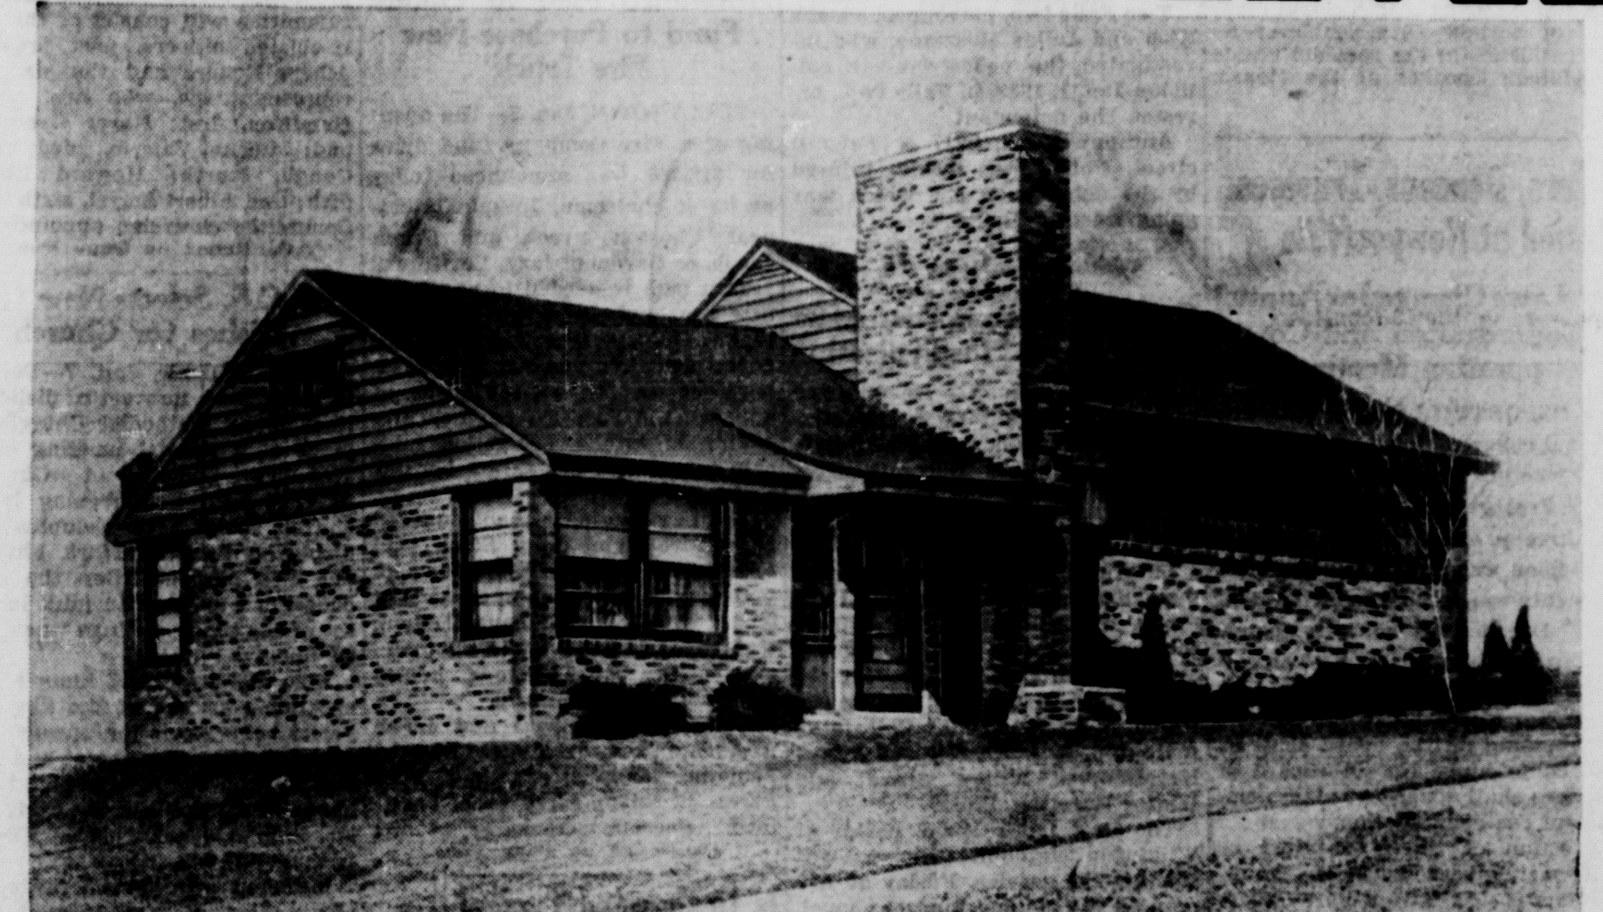

Patrick Henry made his "Give me liberty or give me death" speech on Mar. 23, 1775.

CHOOSE YOUR LEVEL

MASONRY AND REDWOOD siding combine to give Home Design No. 24 a warm, homey, comfortable appeal. The gently sloping roof line of its split-level design is dominated by a huge chimney. This is one of 45 house plans that are featured in "New Brick Homes."

By JOAN O'SULLIVAN

HOMEMAKERS who live in two-story houses are constantly complaining about the inconvenience. It seems as though the doorbell and the downstairs telephone only ring when they're upstairs. Or they get to the top of the flight and remember they left the dust mop at the bottom. That one flight of stairs gets to be an obsession, or so it seems.

Maybe that's why architects have been turning out more and more one-story or split-level plans. They offer modern design minus much of the stair-climbing.

Shown here are two such houses. Home Design 23 is a one-story job that's definitely different. Outside, white-tapered roof supports make an intriguing entrance and a striking carport, while the living room offers a picture-window view of the grounds in front of the house. The room is good-sized, with an angled fireplace providing a charming cozy corner.

The living room is next to the dining room. Both areas are arranged so that they may be treated either as an entire unit or as separate units in the decorating scheme of things.

Back of the dining room is the kitchen. It has several entrances—one to the dining area, one to a hallway which has a stairway to the basement, and an outside entrance that is convenient for grocery deliveries.

Three bedrooms and a bath are at the back of the house.

The plan comprises 28,790 cubic feet.

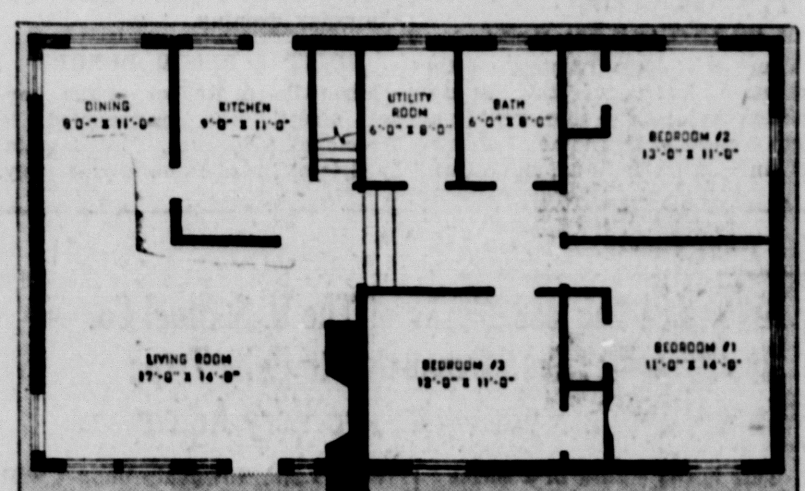

The other home, Design 24, is a split-level house planned for a sloping lot. Built from a combination of masonry and redwood siding, the gently sloping roof line is dominated by a huge chimney.

A spacious living room, a small dining area and a compact kitchen make up the first level. Then up a few steps to level No. 2, and three bedrooms, a bath and a utility room.

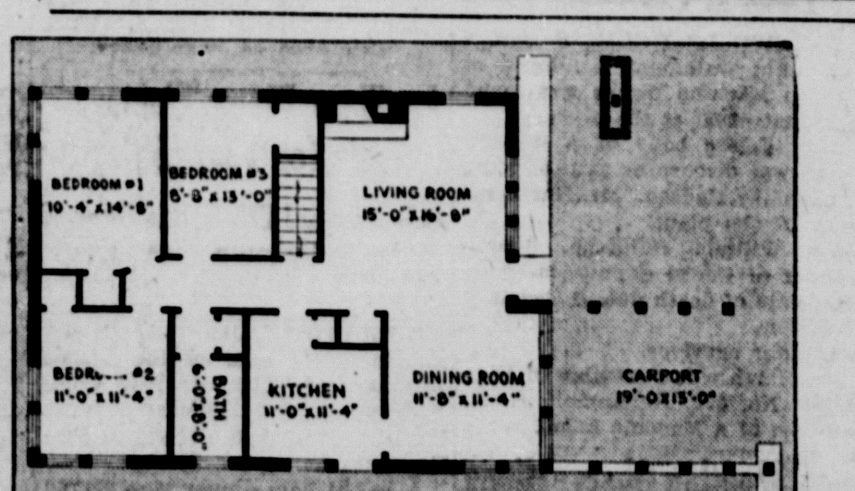

The difference in levels is slight—not sufficient to really get into the stair-climbing category. The plan divides the house into two units—living and sleeping.

The house comprises 20,950 cubic feet.

Both plans are from a recent booklet, "New Brick Homes." If you are interested in obtaining the booklet or plans for either one of these homes, send me a self-addressed stamped envelope in care of this newspaper for the name and address of the publisher.

THE MAIN LEVEL of the house above is taken up by a living room, dining room and kitchen. Bedrooms and bath are on the upper level.

AN ANGLED FIREPLACE makes a cozy corner in the good-sized living room of house below. A picture windows adds to room's charm.

THIS HOME looks well in either city or country settings. Design No. 23 is strictly modern. The white-tapered roof supports contrast entrance. House carport is an intrinsic part of the exterior design.

can be set up as a special district, keeping the expenses confined to a special assessment basis. The Levittown properties would pay for their recreation facilities."

Lustig said that assessed valuations in the township are now $4,500 per child. "In the Levittown section, we estimate assessments would be $8,600 per child, using estimates by the county school superintendent. Eleven per cent of the total population of the Levittown section would be school children. In the rest of the township it is 15 per cent."

Lustig acknowledged that higher school taxes may come in the future, but said "We don't think the tax will be any greater because Levittown would be part of the township. You are getting more children here anyway."

Charles Cella, supervisor of the Institute's Government Consulting Service, said the zoning change would still require Levitt & Sons to keep an overall average of 15,000 square feet per house, reserving sufficient lands to make up the differences in smaller lots. In reply to a statement by Thomas Dawson, of the Middletown twp. Improvement Association that the supervisors in 1948 promised not to amend the zoning code, Cella said, "What the supervisors did in setting the zoning code in 1948 is not necessarily valid in 1953."

Dawson also said that the possible incorporation of Levittown might upset the zoning program. Thomas E. Morris also voiced opposition to changing the zoning of Levitt's land. He challenged the validity of figures reported by the Institute of Local & State Government, and the conclusions of the survey, criticizing the planners for using the 1951 budget figures instead of those of 1952 or 1953.

Morris said the influx of 2,850 school children, "will impose a terrific tax burden. And it would be foolish to grant concessions if Levittown might incorporate," he said. "We would surrender one of our municipal rights, water and sewer service," Morris said. "I think it is just about time we planned to express ourselves."

The entry of the Levittown houses into the township, Morris said, would raise the school tax rate from 35 mills to 45 mills, in addition to the cost of a high school. Replying to Morris, Lustig said his group used the old budget, "because then we know what was spent."

Representing Levitt & Sons at the meeting was Harry Kalish, of the Phila. law firm of Dilworth, Paxson, Kalish and Green. He exhibited a plan for the proposed new homes, of which he said, Levitt planned to build 1,087 in the first unit, with others later. The houses would sell for $18,000, Kalish said. Levitt's plans included large parks, a school site and swimming pool, and complete landscaping. They showed the proposed construction of three Country Club sections on the Levitt land.

Francis Pitkin executive director of the State Planning Board and chairman of INCODEL, attended the meeting, and urged that the zoning amendment be made to accommodate the Country Clubbers.

"We can't hold the hands of the clock still," Pitkin said. "Zoning must be reasonable, and you must recognize the changing conditions in this area."

"The change would reserve the over-all density of the township," he said. Pitkin cited previous recommendations of the planning board which stated, "Zoning must not prevent beneficial developments by rigid regulations. Large-scale developments should not be regulated like small developments."

"Levitt could build his houses on 1,500-square-foot lots, but they would not be attractive. If you would go through other areas where there has been building with no imagination, you would see what has happened. Levitt has good planning, and you are lucky."

The zoning amendments, Pitkin said, "give no inherent right to use the new specifications. Permission is granted only after the board of adjustment approves subdivision plans."

"I think everyone concerned should be commended for the way they are facing this problem," Pitkin said.

Charles Tetlow, who recently became a member of the Middletown twp. School Board, as successor to Kenneth Comly, told the township residents that the Country Clubbers, "Would be carrying their share of the taxation burden. Even without the Levittown houses, we will have double sessions. If the recommendations of the school board had been followed in the past few years, you would probably have a high school now."

"The Country Clubbers would pay $10 each in school taxes," Tetlow said. "Not more than five per cent of the people here pay that."

Middletown townshipsite Ezra Stone, a writer and farmer who used to play in "Henry Aldrich" on the radio, also urged the revision of the zoning laws.

"We should keep Pennsylvania growing with benefits to all," Stone said. "We want planned development, and I would welcome all developers who can meet such plans."

The group had previously engaged, T. Sidney Cadwallader, 2nd, to represent it in opposition to earlier plans of the Highway Department to route the road through Meeting property. "The objection before was to taking any Meeting House ground at all," said Leedom.

Leedom said that all that remained to be worked out was the amount of damages caused by road location on Meeting property.

to $1.03 per cubic foot. Micklewright termed this figure "low" for school construction.

He said the added cost of the school was brought about because the specifications called for "extensive grading necessary because of poor drainage of the school site; additional boiler capacity so that the present boiler room could be done away with and the building, both the new addition and the present building could be heated from a central unit; and provisions for primary electric service that would allow the school authority to buy cheaper electric power for the school."

"The specifications call for not only the addition, but for the complete modernization of the existing building," said Smith.

Micklewright complained that "our labor prices are higher here than in even adjacent areas. Here we have to figure a six-day week with double time for labor on Saturday."

"He said that the preliminary estimates of the work for the 12-room Pennsylvania addition included costs of Saturday work for labor."

In the bidding last night, Gumina Building and Construction Co., of New Brunswick, N. J., bid $1,183,994 for general construction work; William A. Bulman, bid $148,000 for plumbing and drainage work; Charles H. Knecht, of Merchantville, N. Miller stated the new school will afford "complete facilities for 1200 full-time students." At present, he said, there are 1936 students in the school with the seventh, eighth, ninth and tenth grades on double sessions and the eleventh grade on full time. street, Bath street, Washington street, St. Ann's and St. Mark's parochial.

The length of duty each day would be three hours, and estimated cost (salary and equipment) would total $4,275 for the school term of 36 weeks. The suggestion was made that half of the cost be financed by the board and half by Bristol borough. The board was in favor of having this additional protection for the pupils, but there remains a question whether the school board has the legal authority to pay out school funds for police protection, as policing is primarily a municipal function.

The board received a letter from Burgess I. Johnston Hetherington, Sr., in connection with summer playground program, in which it was suggested that Bristol Recreation Board and representatives of the school board get together to lay preliminary plans for providing better staffed and better equipped playground and other recreational facilities for children of Bristol.

The board went on record as being willing to work with the recreation board in coordinating playground activities, and will make an appropriation in its budget.

The board adopted necessary resolutions to enable school employees who are not eligible for retirement system membership to become eligible for social security. This covers primarily women employed in the cafeteria.

It was announced that the new market value of real estate for the borough of Bristol is $25,498,897 as of June, 1952, as established by the State Tax Equalization Board.

Horace W. Jeffries, the board's representative on the Athletic Council, reported 11 football games scheduled for 1953, with four or five home games. There are 11 girls' basketball games scheduled. The board authorized erection of four out-door basketball boards to be placed on the high school athletic field for practice purposes. Mr. Jeffries announced that Bristol is, this year, in Class B in basketball because of the fact it is six students short of the necessary 500 to qualify for Class A. He indicated there is a good chance of making excellent showing in basketball this year. The matter of purchasing four new wrestling mats was referred to the Athletic Council and Mr. Ferguson, wrestling coach, for recommendations as to type of mat best suited for the purposes.

Mrs. Molly Duffy, who had been granted leave due to illness, has returned to her duties.

Employment of an instructor at the school for the blind on Beaver street was approved by the board, and under arrangements made his salary is to be paid in part by the state government in connection with the program for educating the blind and the balance by the Penna. Ass'n for the Blind.

Alfred E. Lewis presided, with all directors being present.

NEWS OF THE LEVITTOWN COMMUNITY

Appears Before Justice; Presented With Puppy

"Whiskers," Tiny White Female Pup, Was Born On Hallowe'en

LEVITTOWN, Jan. 7.—Because her sister was "in the dog house" one day with traffic authorities, the home of Mrs. Frederick N. (Ann) Ludwigsen, 17 White Spruce lane, now houses a dog.

The Ludwigsens' pet is "Whiskers," a tiny white female pup, who was born on Hallowe'en. "Whiskers" is of mixed breed, born at the home of Falls twp. Justice of the Peace Elwood A. Fritz.

Mrs. Ludwigsen's twin sister, Mrs. Claude D. (Marie) Wright, recently appeared before Justice Fritz in connection with a traffic violation. The magistrate administered justice, and then announced that his two dogs had presented the household with a litter of puppies, and that he would give some away. Mrs. Wright notified Mrs. Ludwigsen, who selected "Whiskers."

The Ludwigsens moved here Dec. 4, after living in a trailer park in Croydon. The Wrights are still a trailer family, and now live in Gallagher's Trailer Park.

The two families always traveled together until recently. The two men still work together, as tile layers for the Levittown homes. Winters, the two families would travel to Florida, staying in Fort Lauderdale, Melbourne, Miami, and other parts of the sunshine state.

Mrs. Ludwigsen found a great deal of spirit and teamwork in the southern trailer parks. The trail-erites would go fishing together, and then join in cooking and eating their catch.

The Levittowner, a small house by ordinary standards, seems like a mansion to Mrs. Ludwigsen, after living in a trailer. "When I'm in the bedroom the kitchen seems a mile away," she says.

Mr. and Mrs. Ludwigsen, originally from Brooklyn, N. Y., have a 6½-year-old daughter, Judy Ann, who was born in Winter Haven, Fla.

Mr. Ludwigsen served in the Marine Corps during World War II, and was with the first group to go to Guadalcanal. Before leaving the service, he was decorated with the bronze star and other medals.

March of Time Prepares Feature on Levittown

LEVITTOWN, Jan. 7.—"March of Time" is preparing a half-hour feature film on Levittown for its regular "March of Time" television series.

LIST "FIRST AID" SUGGESTIONS FOR STAINS ON CLOTHING

By Frances Vannoy
(Home Economics Extension Representative)

Rich foods spilled on clothing often leave unsightly spots and stains. First aid to the spot as soon as possible is the first rule.

Grease is probably the stain most often resulting from rich foods. If on wool or silk or other nonwashable fabric, use the pad method of sponging to remove the stain. Make a pad of soft, clean, absorbent cotton cloth and place under the spot. Take another piece of the same kind of cloth and make a smaller pad, then dip the pad lightly into a grease solvent, such as carbon tetrachloride. If you do not know what caused the stain, use cold water. Warm or hot water may set the stain.

Sponge the spot lightly in a curving motion. "Feather out" the edges of the spot by sponging lightly around the edges from the center outward. As the soiled spot is sponged off onto the pads, change to fresh areas on the pads and continue sponging until the spot is removed.

Use small amounts of cleaning fluid and blow gently as you sponge will take three weeks to a month of actual filming.

The film is expected to cover all phases of Levittown — planning, construction, community facilities and activities, political organization, schools, churches and all major aspects involved in the overnight development of a city that it is said will reach a 70,000 population in three years.

The film director is Julius Tanenbaum; writer is Howard Katzman; researcher, Isabel Kohn; cameraman, Fred Beraud, all of New York, N. Y.

and you can avoid forming a ring on the fabric. When a ring is formed, sponge again with fresh fluid, blowing continuously, then rub the fabric together briskly but gently so you won't split or tear the fabric.

For grease stains on washable fabrics, wash in soap and water and give special attention to the spots.

For candle wax stains on wool or silk, nylon or rayon, cotton or linen, scrape off as much wax as possible. Place a blotter beneath and above the stain, then press with a hot iron to remove the solid wax. Remove the remaining grease with carbon tetrachloride, using the pad method previously described.

Delhaas High Keeps Its Record Clean; Wins Sixth Game

Delhaas High's unbeaten quintet won its sixth straight game yesterday as it registered a 46-38 win over Trenton Jewish Community Center on the Rohm & Haas court.

Larry Katz again paced the Delhaas team in scoring with 14 points. Eight of these came in the final quarter to enable Delhaas to keep its lead.

Delhaas had a 10-4 lead in the first quarter but this appeared to be diminishing towards the close of the second session until Don Pagans 6' 5" substitute, scored three points to give the Rogers' Road team a half-time lead of 19-14.

In the final quarter, the Jersey team lost the services of Shagg, mainstay of their attack, via the personal foul route. Simons was high scorer for the losers.

It marked the first time in four years that Delhaas has beaten the JCC.

A Special Opportunity for young women in
LOWER BUCKS COUNTY

In order to provide more telephone service for the new communities of this area before the new Windsor Central Office can be completed, we are preparing to place in operation a number of additional coin box telephones.

This means job opportunities for a number of young women, starting early in 1953, in our Langhorne Central Office and in the new Telephone Company Building on Newportville Road near its intersection with Oxford Road.

The jobs to be filled are good jobs, with pleasant working conditions and good pay. If you are interested, or if you know someone else who might be interested, fill out and mail the coupon below. Our representative will make a personal call to explain the details.
